A Public Calamity

In the removal of the Rev. W. H. Hadley, of the Ministry at-Large, (Unitarian) to mother field of labor, Chleago suffers a loss, which we fear, will not soon be repaired. Since this gentleman has been a resident of the clip, the has devoted his time and attention to the amelioration of the condition of the poor and to the prevention of the condition of the poor and to the prevention of the causes of poverty, with a degree of success which men, working with his limited means, will ever be able to attain. Uniting in himself rare energy of character, and the peculiar mental traits which give him command over those with whom he has to deal, with wise with whom he has to deal, with wise without which and they form the window and took to his heels down to make any of the second Universalist Sabbah were repeated, the Second Universalist Sabbah in the removal of the Rev. Next National Fair.

A resolution passed the United States Agricultural Society, in session at Washington, to hold its next National Agricultural Fair in the Northwest, providing pecuniary inducements are offered. We publish the proceedings of the Convention on the subject in another column. Now comes the question of particular location. The leading competitors are Chicago, Indianapolis, Peorla, St. Louis, Switzerland, Italy and the United States, are are Chicago, Indianapolis, Peerla, St. Louis, Pittsburg and Cincinnati. But as Chicago is the commercial emporium of the Northwest, epresented.

protests on our table, for which we have no protests on our table, for which we have no proom in our columns short of excluding the current news of the day. The larger share of these writers look to some speedy action by our Legislature, withdrawing the dire spectacle of public strangulations from the gaze of the ignorant and the victous. Some, indicat, seem impressed with the notion that an easy on the humanities will millee to restrain the animal eravings of the moh who rush madly through mire and sleet to witness the exhibition of a fellow morfal choked to death in the air. This is a folly as surprising as the vice which it reproves. As well talk in parables to exitic caroning over a stangiter yard, as seek to mpilify the lustineis excited in a large city by the near prospect of a public hanging. The other suggestion is a wise one, and we trust it may be acted upon by the Legislature in season to meet our

Our citizens well remember the orgics of drunkenness and blasphemy held in an ocean of mud last spring, on the oceasion of the execution of Staub—cight or ten thousand men, women and children choking the silmy streets, racing through alleys and aeroes lots, overthrowing each other in the gutters, cur-ing, bellowing, and venting all bestial noises, in their eagences to fellow a closed carriage containing a doomed man. The spectacle was sickening beyond expression. It revealed passions and fastes in the human character which inight well forfify a doubt as to the permanence of organized society—passions and tastes which we believe would never have been called into exhibition without the particular stimulant afferded by the occa-sion. Under this pressure of excitement, this non. Under this pressure of excitement, this observestion of depravity and hardness of seart, heightened by a view of the morial agonies of a fellow creature, the only wonder that some new deed of blood did not crow ries, new sentences and new executions. This is no uncommon occurrence—a fact fully established by the statistics of crime, here and in England. In such an event it would be a question of some moral importance, how far society itself was responsible for the crime which it sought to punish.

how far society itself was responsible for the crims which it sought to punish.

We have never heard an argument advanced in favor of public executions. Hanging is bad enough; and in deploring its necessity. The most carnest opposes of the death penalty will often hear or be will ness of deeds for which he admits hanging is too faild a punishment. While society is infeated with everlenes, among whom mirder only ceases to be a pustime when it perils their needs, the death penalty under proper and guards must remain. But there is no reason why the vike appetites to be found in every considerable community, should be periodically whetted by its public performance. A law prescribing a method for private executions, fixing the places and nominating the persons who shall witness and attest the entrying out of the sentence, can be easily drawn, and ought to receive the unanimous vote of the Legislature. We trust the adjournment will not take place until a law shall have been passed, meeting all the requirements of justice in the premises, without ministering at the same time to the deprivatives which make criminal laws necessary.

Proposition to build a Railrend to Salt-Lake.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Courier says that Mr. Lander proposes to build a railrend from Pacitic City, on the Mis-souri, at the mouth of Platta River, to Salt Lake City, for $5,000 per mile, provided that he usl-lowed to import his rails without duty, and be assigned one section of land for each ten miles of the route; or, paying the duties on the rails, he offers to do the same work for $10,000 per mile, with the same allowages of land. The mile, with the same allowance of land. The liptance is 1,100 miles. At the first rate, the lotal cost would be five million five hundred thousand dollars; at the second eleven million.

In 1804, when the original loan was its process of rapid liquidation, the claim was for the first time formally brought to the notice of the Biard of Trustees. The then position of the hondholders was that the Trust was not liable for the expenses of the negotiation of the loan by which the Canal was completed, and that Mr. Leavitt must look to the State for his compensation. My predecessor in office, J. McRoberts, Esq., was the Trustee on the part of the State, and Hon. J. A. Matteson was Governor. To the latter, Mr. Leavitt applied for an approval of his demand; and with the application submitted a mass of documentary evidence touching the nature, value and difficulty of the service rendered the State in the darkest hour of her history, from which I select the following as sufficient: which I select the following as sufficient:

There are a variety of other guarantees for the trists, of testimony to which, taken together, every judge pays more regard than to the mere obligation of the oath. It is notorious that much more importance is staceded, not only by lawyers, but by all sensible men to the way in whoch a witness tells his slory, his manner his look, his consistency, its general probability, the way in which it amage together, than to the mere fact of his having aworn to speak the truth. All these guarantees exist in the case of a plaintiff or defendant just as much as in shose of any other witness, though one of them perjured himself ten times over.—A. Y. Times.

Hon. Van H. Higgins, of this county, has introduced a bill into the Legislature to enable parties to suits to testify in courts of justice. It is to be hoped that it may be passed.—En. ed. He wrote as follows:

Omnao. May 12h. 1854

D. Lelvitt, Eng.—Dest Sir—Enclosed I send you all the papers given me by you in reference to your distin against the State of Illinois, for sections of the feed and its cost, swill milk can be produce it from the sale of pure milk. From the nature of the feed and its cost, swill milk can be produce it from undistilled grain.

Suppose a swill, and a country milk wagon drive up to the door of some dime-loving (I believe the State by adjusting the matter in the last of the State by adjusting the matter in the last of the State by adjusting the matter in the last of the State by adjusting the matter in the last of the State by adjusting the matter in the last of the State by adjusting the matter in the last of the Cheal, the Government will instruct the country milk man? Why that he must sell in milk of less than coat, or, porbay, being a little unserupulous, and to present himself—there stands your dilutor and doper ready made to hand, as your parsgraph insisted.

The dairymen here have an interest in the success of some of the largest milk routes in the city—they have confidence in some of the men TRADE OF THE AMOOR RIVER.—Mr. Pickens, our Minister to Russia, writes that the trade of the Amoor River—gently fillibustered by Russia from China—is something like $50,000,000 a PEAD LETTERS.—During the year 1859, the sum of 459,918.12 was recovered from dead letters re-ceived at the General Post Office, Washington. touch the dishonest part of the trade-but whether they will be allowed to go on, or whether they will be crushed out, as some al-ready have been, remains with the citizens and authorities of the City of Chicago. Why not license these men? Compel them way not necesse these men' Compet teem by bond and security to sell just what is pur-chased. If swill milk is considered good and wanted, license them to sell swill milk, but com-pel them to display it upon their wagons in con-spicuous letters, the same with pure milk, and the result would not be doubtful. I believe that such a measure would remove most of the insuch a measure would remove most of the in-ducements for diluting without increasing the ducements for diluting without increasing the price of pure milk to the consumer, and, by rendering the business more stable, would be better for them as well as the producer. It may be questionable whether or no the facilities are not too great for unscrappilous and dishonest men to get the control of a business, the abuse of which may have such disastrous effects on the

NEXT NATIONAL PAIR. [From the Railroad Record.]
In 1850, Ohio had not over one hundred frailroad in active operation; the line per

Mr. C. B. Galvert, of Maryland, protected against the whole system of National Shows, and said that in our widely extended country may could not be made of use or profit. He had consistently arged the same views for a number of years, and time had given him no reason for a charge.

Mr. Wildor, of Massachusetts, with due defenses to the views of the gentlemin, differed is toof from his conclusions. The annual cylibition of the Society had been its very life indicated in the support, and has been the means of building it up to its present position. The harmonic of the Society had been its very life indicated in the country.

Judge Kallogg was gired to beer such hoporable testimopy, and said it coincided with his own opinions. He begged the members, forgetting all sectional differences, to meet together on Western soil as become of the country.

Col. Wilder explained what had been the castom of the Society. A guarantee find had always been made by individuals of the chy at which the show was held, of such nature that the subscribers were assessed pro rate for whatever deficiency might arise safer all the receipts of the exhibition had been appropriated to the liquidation of its expenses. The Society had, fortunately, never called upon its guarantees to pay a doliar of the several funds, just it was undoubtedly the best and asfast way.

Prof. Cary was opposed to the connection of the National Society with any local one, for in the latter there was always more or less of local partisanship, which should not be allowed to act in a national organization.

Mr. Case of Indians thought the next Pair became a fairty action or versets, which was disease.

After a long tenure of twenty-eight years assistant, Abernethy became surgeon to St. Bartholomew's—the flayed saint of Smithfield. John at Enfield—Lamb's Enfield—where he could repair o' summer afternoons after lecture, far from the moody stillness and murkiness of Bedford I ow, and mounted on his favorite mate Jenny, happy as a school-boy to get home. On such occasions he doffed his professional black knee breeches, sift stockings and shoes, and came to licture, rural and squire like, in drab kerseymers and top boots. He delighted in getting a chatty clubable friend down on the Saturday. After London, the country is only another name for a lower heaven.

The Prince waited, funning. He rang and called. Three times "the Prince" was announced by the servants, who were more afraid of Abernethy than even the great Hungarian Prince. It was just Seylia and Charibdis over again. At the third announcement a black cloud gathers on Abernethy's brows, he slammed his book to and waid, "I will come to the Prince?"

"Mr. Abernethy," said the Prince, "do you know who I am you have been keeping here! I am the Prince Esterbary."

"And I," said the Dootor, "am John Abernethy, and this is my man James. James, show the Prince Beterbary."

"And I," said the Dootor, "an John Abernethy, and this is my man James. James, show the Prince Esterbary."

"I' will color the the door"—a fine, sturdy rebuke for fools presuming upon the vulgar accident of rank.

When a student was laughing, or chipping the desk, or was otherwise inattentive, Abernethy, and this is my man James. James, show the Prince betterwise inattentive, Abernethy would fix his dreadful eye on him, and say—

"I' It the lecture, sir, is not interesting to you, I shall beg of you to walk out."

Nothing could make him miss lecture. We see he went to it the day his daughter married. Ou another occasion he was being led with great rejuctance across the hospital square, just at two o'clock, to an important consultation. Suddenly the staunch maniet und, as ensaines, call him pig-headedstopped, drew out his arm from that of his bland snarer's and growing. "No, sir; Pill be d—d if I do?" strode off to the lecture theatre. That rough bluntness made asd duemies. A Chlonel comes to Abernethy. "Show me your tongue. Ah! that's bad enough."

"You're right there," said the Colonel, wishing to be familiar and fashionably gay. "Wou're right there," said the Colonel, wishing to be familiar and fashionably gay. "Show me your tongue. Ah! that's bad enough."

We select him as a fine type of the honest, blunt doctor, and the healthy, rough, brave hearted, testy Englishman—an anguinar, eccentre, genius, tao straightforward to rab dying men's wounds as too many in his profession do, with the creamy scented salve of lies and finiteries.

Brave John Abernethy was born in Colsman street, London, on the 3d af April, 1764, one year after the great John Hunter settled in our block Babel. Coleman street, the old street that Cowley celebrated, lit no special bonfire the bright hour the honest man was born.

In due time John, stuffed, petted, saubbed when he asked puzzled quesulons, dandled, and teased, like other children, was sent to the Wolverhampton Grammar School, founded by a knight in the reign of Henry VIII., a school wherefall theigh bublis of wit, Congreye, was educated. John, "careless, but greye, was educated. John, "careless, but not slovenly in dress," as history kindly con-descends to tell us, duly trembled at Dr. Rob-at Eafeld, in April, 1831.

He died tranquilly, not struggling wit death, but like a beaten player who calmy avows himself beaten. "Is there anybody in the room "I be said to his servant. "Mo sir,"—then softly went the worn out head of the pillow, and the great man died.

Abernethy was benevolent, and thought it no merit to be so. To poor students he was kind and considerable—on one occasion, at a

For instance, to Abernethy, always in grumbling fret at "a parcel of people with came to me with nothing the matter," enter one day a ribanded, simpering, silly gently women with a red-nosed, silly, tight-lace daughter. John looks, with a puffing monit just a glance of contempt, and says, "We madam, do you know there are more the thirty yards of bowels squeezed underness that belt of your daughters?—go home as cut it." Out homness curaged, silly moth and popping, foolish daughter, almost te much offended to remember the well-earned free. Give Nature fair play, O ye daughter and there will be less consumption and few red noses from tight heding.

A miserable, peevish invalid, alling as querulous, says to him, "Oh, Mr. Aberneth I have something dreafful the matter withis arm. There! ugh!" (twisting his one lobos) "that gives me sulesse pain", (makin stace.)

elbow) "that gives me intense pain" (makin a face.)
"Bah!" says Bear Doctor, "what a for you must be to do it, then !"
O'all skam, puling patients he had a rpe clat horror. One susted inequirer be told test oysters—shells and all; another, anythin in the house but the beliews and poker.
"Oh, Mrs. Grundy, that dreadful man!" At lecture he never used notes and neve hesitated. If he wanted attention he pause for a second or two. He was very impatien of interruption, and a chance kneck at the door of she theatre often pot him out. On on occasion the great Prince Esterhazy, wh scattered diamonds where he walked, came the behalf of the control of th the rebuff—lowering his foil, if we may use a metaphor taken from the schools, to acknowledge a palpable hit. A gentleman came to him with excruciating acuraigic pains in his shoulder. Abernethy was ususually rough and impatient:

"Well, I know nothing about ii." he bar ked ont, before the patient had half told his symptoms. The sick wit retorted:

"God's know how you should: but if you will have patience tid I tell you, perhaps then you may."

Abernethy at once said:
"Bit down," and gave himself up with kind patience as a listener. Decasionally severer repartees were given him. A lady to whom he was blant grew rebellions. She said:
"I have heard of your redeems before I came, but I hardly expected this."

Abernethy answered nothing, sput went on at his books and handed her the speciption.

descends to tell us, duly trembled at Dr. Rob-ortson, a learned, passionate man, with a re-dundanj wig. He became after many kunck-lings, &c., head of the finist form, and known as a bard working, bumorous, trritable, rather buil-dog sort of a boy, tenaciously Scotch, botly Irish. He was "very sharp, sit" sby, and hasty. It is very important not to let your boy's shyness ture to suspiciouness, or his fine ardor against wrong take mere fill temper. Dr. Robertson having too great an admiration for the dead languages to care much about English, John went to a Miss Ready, in King street to learn writing and admiration for the dead languages to care much about Eaglish, John went to a Miss Redy, in King street to learn writing and arithmetic—something like a father who would cloth his son and have him taught music, but compels him to go out and beg for his daily dinner.

Abernethy could have been a great actor or a great lawyer, his powers of memory and concentration were so, remarkable. He used to boast that if his father had let him be'n lawyer. 'We would have known every Act of concentration were so remarkable. He used to boast that if his father had let him be'a lawyer, "he would have known every Act of Parliment by heart."

Work, work. That honest brain goes like a spinning-wheel. In 1796 he becomes an F. R. S. he writes papers for the Phil. Transac. which are not mere papers. He rublishes Physiological Essays, penetrating, clear, and practical. He saw deper, truer, and wider than most men. His paper on injuries of the head attracts attention; but not waiting for foolish hand-clapping, he experiments on tumors and vervous irratability, birth marks, and ancurism. Papits increases; and, last move of all, he move to quiet Bedford Row; January, 1780, he marries—ane of his most successful experiments. He married a Miss Anne Threlfall, the daughter of a retired trademan living at Edmonston. He saw befirst kindly nursing one of his patients, and felffin love with herinkasober, rational, unpoetical way. Shy, proud, bury, affined to dangle and fool, he wrote Mistrees Anne a note, telling the secret of his plain honest heart, and giving her a fortulght to reply. The asawer was shot but pleasant, "Yes. We wonder if the busy man kissed the letter or not. Parhaps, by the side of some deathbed, it struck a sober and subdued joy into his heart. The Scotch heart is a fine heart, but it never beats quick enough for us. Southey left his bride at the church door to start for Portural John. He was a faerce and dreadful exposer of the church door to start for Portural John.

sancary, 1700, as marries—she of a retired rademan living at Edmonston. He saw her first kindly unraing one of his patients, and tellfin love with herina sober, rational, uppertical way. Shy, proud, busy, afraid of being rejected, and unable to dangle and fool, he wrote Mistress Anne a note, telling the secret of his plain honest heart, and giving her a fortnight to reply. The answer was short but pleasant, "Yes. We wonder if the busy man kissed the letter or not. Porhaps, by the side of some deathbed, it struck a sober and subdued joy into his heart. The Scotch heart is a fine heart, but it never beats quick enough for us. Southey left his bride at the church door to start for Portugal John, the day he was married, did not miss his lecture; no more he did, years after, the day his own daughter was married. He would unver even come to a consultation at two o'clock the hour of lecture.

Now, at this epoch of his life his first child was borne, was written "my book," on his great simple doctrine of The Constitutional Origin of Local Diseases. It came out in 1804. He wrote to show the value and importance of the stomach. We do not live to eat, Oye aldermen! but ear to live. Says Abernethy, diseases consist of an alteration in the condition of some structure, or the function or occupation of that structure; therefore all structures, being fed by the stomach, must be influenced for good and harm by the state of the stomach. Hunter had taught him that the whole body sympathizes with all its parts. Aberthany claimed for function—the woise work done by an organ—that which Cuvier insisted on and Owen examplified in regard to structure; is a relationship inevitable between the whole and its parts. He does not explain the nature of this sympathy, he ently proved.

"Pooh !" says rough man, ripping it off "Pooh!" says rough man, ripping it of with a "bah" like a cannon.
"It's all very well," sighs smooth man to himself; "but, by Jove, sir, that "pooh" bles twenty guinues out of my pocket!"

Poor smooth man!—how we must all pity smooth men! But ob, how kind this rough man could be! what a large heart be had On one occasion a room was preparing to an operation; the anxious assistant had ar ranged a long row of horrid shining knive and saws of various sinspes on the table.

"It'el all right," said Abernethy, "no there's one thing forgetten," and he threw throad clean cloth over the instruments. "It bad enough," he added in a low voice, "for poor dog to have to be operated on withou being obliged to see those terrible instruments."

Another day he was perferning a sever regard to structure; i. e. a relationship inevitable between the whole and its parts. He does not explain the nature of this sympathy, he only proved its existance. Doctors do not know what diseases are; they only as yet know their symptoms and their results.

It was in supporting Hunter's theory of life that he roused such a swarm of enemies, and chief among them.—" Et in, Brute"—Mr.
Lawrence, an old pupil. Abertheny took a spiritual view of that great mystery—lifethe primum noble which sets matter te work.
Lawrence, taking a lower, more especial and restless view of it refused to regard it as anything but a high product of organism; notof ceurse denying the special work in the world of a divinity as master workman, but carrying the miraculousic a higher level. At colleague of Abernethy the contrivers seemed the more painful and indecent. Abernethy denied that life was a more mechanic efectriclty, or that mere motion implied sensation.

Mind he said, was a power added to life, as life was to structure. He called disorder a a faulty action of serves, which neglected became a faulty action of vessels, which was disease.

being obliged to see those terrible instruents."

Another day he was perferming a eeve operation on a woman. He had given her little kind dram of encouragement, and it patient bere the knile like a Roman matro After a few seconds of living death, the powoman muttered carnestly, but firmly:

"I hope, six, it will not be long."

"No, indeed," said Abernethy, forgettin his caution, "that would be too horrible."

There is a good story hold by Mr. Abern thy's biographer, Mr. Macilwain, of hones John attending a miser. He tound him ha ly dressed and in a shabby room, and set hi down at once as a ghoor gentleman. O going, he refused his fee, kindly but decisivity. The miser begged him net to be deese' ed by appearances, but to take his gaines, it could afford it—well afford it. Aberneth, stubborn and mistrustful kept backing or and declining. The only gentleman, gettin vexed, forgot himself at last, and fair spreamed out, paking it at the Doctor.

"By G—'sir, I mist on your taking it!"

"By G—'sir, I wont!" roard Aberneth bolting out and slandming the door after his the rejected guines dropping at his back an inside the door.

But weapnet conclude, and shut the van again on a honest dontor. Jones Modern death.
